

Journal clubs (輪講) are groups that gather regularly to critically discuss academic papers that all members have read. Journal clubs are one of the most common practices of highly successful research laboratories and among the most effective activities to improve critical thinking, discussion, and research writing skills; in addition to having fun, these are the goals of this class. This workshop will require participants to read a short research paper before each weekly session to prepare for in-class discussion of both the research content and the writing. The papers will be distributed the previous week along with a list of the key terms, preferably translated into Nihongo. In class, we will analyze and discuss the papers for focus, context, linkage, specificity, logic, clarity, coherence, and cogency. We will consider writing techniques that improve or degrade these qualities.

We will also discuss reading strategies to increase reading speed, efficiency, and comprehension. The instructor will provide the research paper and lead the discussion for the first session on 29 September, but for subsequent sessions, participants will be expected to take turns nominating the research papers and leading the discussion. To stimulate discussion, reports of interdisciplinary studies of short to moderate length and of interest to a broad scientific audience will be preferred; research that is topical, elegant, fascinating, or provocative is particularly appropriate. Questions, comments, and critical discussion of the research papers will be expected from every participant in every session they attend. In addition, aspects of research communication techniques will be explained by the instructor in the final portion of each session; participants are welcome to request specific topics for these explanations. A TOEIC score 740 or higher (or equivalent) is recommended.

The nine sessions will be held from 18:30 to 20:00 on Wednesdays from 29 September through 1 December 2021:

September 29; October 6, 13, 20, 27; November 10, 17, 24; and December 1.
