

Class name: 中上級火 Upper Intermediate Tue. -Question buffet (Online /18:30-20:00)

Instructor: Ms. Melissa Noguchi

Do you regularly use English for work? Do you have foreign colleagues and friends that you need to communicate with in English? Do you have questions about English that come up while you're using it for work or socializing? If so, this course might be perfect for you.

This course is different from typical English classes that are based upon a textbook or handouts. The goal of this course is to create a space where participants can ask questions about the English they encounter and use in their daily lives. (Question buffet:質問し放題)

In many standard English courses, instructors decide on and provide the materials and topics taught during the course. This is very important for participants who want to improve their general English skills. But, often these courses don't cover problems or questions that come up in participants' real-life use of English.

In this course, participants will be asked to prepare questions to ask in class. Questions can be about anything at all. Here are some examples:

- The meaning or nuance of a word or phrase that you read or heard
- Something you wanted to say or write but weren't sure how to express in English
- Something that's been confusing you since junior high school
- When to use more casual or more formal English
- Anything English-related that you're interested in or curious about

By creating a space where participants can ask specific questions about English, I hope to provide support for your real-life English experience and use. Asking questions and hearing the answers to questions will help participants improve the English they use for work or socializing in very specific ways.

If there are lessons where there are not enough questions to fill the full time, the remaining time will be used for developing conversation skills. In-class conversation will lead to mini grammar and vocabulary lessons that will help participants express themselves using more correct and more natural conversation.

This course is extremely participant-oriented. Participants will benefit from both asking questions and hearing their answers. It is my hope to create a safe, comfortable, and active course that will support your everyday English needs.
